

My beautiful hometown

Yun Peng, Elite College

Did you know that I lived in Shenzhen, China until I was 4 years old before I came to Canada? Shenzhen is also considered the Chinese Silicon Valley, and is where I was born. I had a lot of friends in kindergarten, and had a lot of fun. This following essay will explore my childhood in Shenzhen, such as the environment and my life that lived there.

The environment in Shenzhen is very beautiful, especially because it is a seaside country. There are many beautiful beaches in Shenzhen, one of them is Dameisha and I swam there with my grandma, and my dad. There is a park named Dashahe that I used to go often with my grandpa, my grandma, and my dad. There are people playing football there, but what I liked doing the most was climbing a tree, which was perfect for climbing. In summary, Shenzhen has many extraordinary places that you should check out.

“Life is easier when it’s small, so enjoy it.” I had plenty of friends there that I have met in kindergarten, and we used to play after school. At that time, I liked school a lot, so I used to be the first one to enter it. I lived with my grandparents for the most part, and had a pretty fun time there. In my class, there were three teachers and around 70 students. As you know, in kindergarten we just play and learn a little bit, but I as the student with the best behavior, so when the teacher punishes all of the students, I’m the only boy in the class. When the teacher wants to punish all of the boys, she usually just says “all of the boys”, but I don’t go there because I know that I did nothing wrong. To sum it up, I had a good life in kindergarten, and remember that life is easier when you are small.

I had a good life in Shenzhen.
